Children in the Media Age

Children in the Media Age

In recent years, the media age has gained tremendous momentum. Digital media are everywhere: in professional life, in leisure time, and the internet has long become a natural part of our everyday lives.

Everyone is fascinated by the almost unlimited possibilities, especially our children. Facebook, Twitter, WhatsApp, online games, and more have a significant influence on how children spend their free time and how they communicate. At the same time, users are becoming younger and younger. As parents, we are starting to have doubts: Is all of this really good for our children?
